DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This large church, rebuilt after 1950, is a simplified version of Gothic architecture. Constructed of granite, it consists of a gabled nave with rectangular towers at three corners and an adjoining educational building to the east of this, which is three stories high. The tallest tower, on the northwest corner, houses the church bells, and has an arched entrance on two sides. The Gothic style stained glass windows are tall and narrow with pointed arches.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

History:

The original Zion Church stood on the corner of Mill and Church Streets (now 312 Mill Street, the home of Levi Phillips, Jr.) from 1802 until 1846 and was known as Garrettson's Chapel. It was named for Rev. Freeborn Garrettson who preached the first Methodist sermon in Dorchester County in 1779 at the home of Squire Airey near Salem, Maryland, for which he was arrested and imprisoned in the old Cambridge Jail.

Five Methodist Societies were organized in 1780 at private homes in Dorchester County. By 1800, the Methodist Society in Cambridge was in need of a regular meeting place and began plans for the erection of a chapel. Garrettson Chapel, a two story building, was completed in 1802. It was later known as Zion Chapel. By 1845, the Chapel had outgrown its building on Church Street, and a new church was begun on Race Street. The old Zion Chapel was sold in 1846 and moved across the street, where it was later used as a carriage shop. The new Zion Church on Race Street was the first stone church in Cambridge. Remodeled in 1881, this granite structure with a gabled nave, had a 166 foot tower and spire on the front and Gothic stained glass windows. In 1910, a fire destroyed Zion Methodist Church, as well as a large area of the business section on Race Street. The Trustees of Zion Church promptly purchased a lot on the corner of Locust and Mill Streets and began the erection of a new Zion Church. The cornerstone was laid in 1911. In 1950, however, Zion Methodist Church was destroyed by fire a second time. Following a period of fund raising, the drawings of registered church architects, Giffin and Fink of Philadelphia, were approved by the building committee and the low bid of Charles E. Brohawn and Bros. was approved by the congregation. The first phase of reconstruction was the Educational Building, and later in 1956, the building of the sanctuary began. The new church is a large modified Gothic Revival structure constructed of steel and concrete with granite walls.
